Numerical verification findings

22 October 2026 | Separate accompanying note

The revised institutional report is Part I of the combined document. Parts II and III retain all source wording and numerical content at the user's express request. Findings below have not been applied to those two parts.

Material findings

2023 profit versus comprehensive income

The audited 2024 consolidated statements show 2023 profit of KZT 18.518265 bn and comprehensive income of KZT 18.599109 bn (printed p. 2). The original institutional report confused these measures; Part I now distinguishes them.

2025 annual versus preliminary data

The supplied 2025 annual report reports Group assets of KZT 5,995.8 bn and CCP financial assets of KZT 5,610.9 bn (printed p. 63), versus 5,986.8 and 5,601.9 in Part II. The KZT 384.9 bn residual is the same. The annual report also reports net profit of about KZT 15.3 bn, expenses of KZT 11.3 bn and a personnel-cost share of 62% (pp. 64–65); Parts II–III use approximately 15.04 bn, 11.40 bn and 69%. These reporting sets must not be silently mixed.

Dividends

The official AGM decision approves KZT 4,589,483,743.47, exactly equal to 1,075,231 shares × KZT 4,268.37. Relative to the approved KZT 15,298,263 thousand profit amount, this is approximately 30.0%, rather than the 30.1% obtained from rounding both numerator and denominator to billions.

Internal arithmetic and models

Part II's displayed capex of KZT 0.5 bn divided by operating income of KZT 30.09 bn is 1.66% (about 1.7%), not 1.8%; unpublished precision could affect that comparison. Using Part III's displayed DDM inputs exactly gives approximately KZT 78,265.90 rather than KZT 78,295. Underlying unrounded model inputs were not supplied, so this is a reproducibility gap, not proof that the workbook used identical precision.

Checks that passed

The disclosed shareholder categories total 99.98%, consistent with the stated rounding difference. All thirteen risk scores equal likelihood × impact, and their heat-map positions match. The two supplementary reports' complete text-node sequences and table counts were checked against the source Word files.

Limits of verification

This is not a certification that every number in the unchanged supplementary reports is correct. Their underlying Excel workbook, complete historical input set and authenticated share-price series were not supplied. Forecast growth, beta, terminal assumptions, sensitivities and risk scores are analyst assumptions or calculations, not verifiable future facts. Some historical role and publication-date claims also remain qualified beside the relevant text in Part I.
